Coffman Engineers' Anchorage Engineer Earns High-Level NACE Certification

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, August 31, 2021 – Coffman Engineers, Inc. (Coffman) is pleased to announce that Anchorage mechanical engineer, Scott Patterson, has earned the National Association of Corrosion Engineers (NACE) Senior Internal Corrosion Technologist Certification.

A certified Senior Internal Corrosion Technologist has a thorough understanding of electrochemical and corrosion principles and is capable of comprehensive assessments required to develop and manage corrosion control programs and high-level internal corrosion problems in pipeline systems. Certification candidates must successfully complete the exam, NACE courses, and meet work experience and education requirements.

Scott is a critical team member on Coffman's industrial mechanical team. He has supported integrity management and corrosion control engineering work, including developing advanced integrity management analysis tools and solutions for many major clients. Scott has also worked on performing critical stress analysis and destructive testing of specialized downhole drilling tools.

Scott is a 2014 graduate of the University of Vermont with dual bachelor's degrees in mechanical engineering and mathematics. In addition, he is a US Olympic skier and a three-time US National Champion. Scott joined Coffman as an intern in 2012. Since then, Scott has become a prominent figure in the skiing community with the support and sponsorship of Coffman, where he continues to advance his career.
